Course descriptions	“Knowing is not enough; we must apply. Willing is not enough; we must do.” – Johann Wolfgang van Goethe Have you ever wondered: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Why it is necessary to even understand cultural differences?</li> <li>▪ What are these differences in cultures across the globe?</li> <li>▪ Why do these differences arise?</li> <li>▪ How do these differences have an effect on society and business in particular?</li> </ul> The subject of the course Cultural Diversity Management (CDM) not only addresses these questions but motivates you to come up with even more questions, draw up different scenarios and fosters cognitive decision making. On completion of this course you will be able to place yourself in a role of a consultant who can help companies identify the issues around working with a multicultural team, internally or externally and specifically zoom in on areas of incompatibility. You will also be able to create an understanding of the different behaviour patterns based on different models relevant to the field of culture studies.

General course information
Required previous knowledge	None.
Recommended literature	Geert Hofstede, Geert Jan Hofstede, Michael Minkov, Cultures and Organizations: Software of the Mind, 3rd edition. McGraw – Hill USA, 2010.
Way of working	This course is entirely interaction based. Most of the learning that takes place is through real life examples being shared in class by students of different nationalities. This helps in extending the knowledge mentioned in books into real life examples and situations which are shared first hand by students from different cultures. It is also very interesting to note the different reactions to a situation in class based on differences in culture. Therefore presence in class is essential to experience this, first hand.
Exam	In week 9 of the course, you will be given a case study. Based on one Hofstede's model and a self-chosen model, you have to work out the questions relating to the case study. After having answered the questions, you have to play the role of a consultant who has to draw up an advice regarding training the personnel in addressing and anticipating cultural problems and anticipate for that company in that particular setting.
Caesura	A final score of 5,5 or higher leads to passing the course and receiving the related 2 ECTS.
Retake exam	The retake of the exam is scheduled at the end of the semester. This is usually two or three weeks after the first exam week.
